What is a nursery?

A nursery is a place where children are cared for outside the family. In Germany, children can attend nursery from the age of 1 year. If the parents are working, attending school or on a language course, a child can go to nursery earlier. People who know children very well work in the nursery. They have been trained or have studied for it. They are called educators.

Why is nursery important for my child?

Before children go to school, they should be able to do certain things. For instance, these are the things they learn in the nursery:

- Being attentive
- Observing rules
- Concentrating
- Answering questions
- Being independent
- Listening to others
- Finding their way in a group

In addition, children make friends and learn a lot of new things in the nursery. Parents are relieved and have time for work, for studying or for a language course, for example.

What is child day care?

What is child day care?

In Hamburg, children can either go to a nursery or day care. Childminders work in day care.

These are individuals who look after a smaller group of children. They look after children aged 0 – 14 years at their homes. Sometimes they have also rented extra rooms for day care. Childminders have undergone pedagogical training. They know a lot about children and parenting. The City of Hamburg regularly inspects childminders. Childminders look after 5 children max. at the same time.

The groups are small. Many parents and children like that. Parents can plan the childcare time directly with the childminder.

Day care is not a temporary solution until a nursery place becomes available.

The City of Hamburg pays for childcare.

The parents must submit an application.

You can find further information and forms on the website of the City of Hamburg:

Language learning in the nursery

In the nursery, children learn the German language quite incidentally. In some nurseries they also learn several languages. There are lots of great opportunities to learn words there: singing circle, finger games, movement games, reading aloud and storytelling, theatre games, picture books and much more.

Learning German as a first language

In the early years, children learn their first language. Children can also learn several languages at the same time. Some children speak a different language at home than at the nursery.

It is important for children to learn the language of their family. In the nursery they get help with learning German. When a child learns German as a first language, he or she sometimes needs support.

Language support in the nursery

The educators in the nursery are well acquainted with language development. They help and support children in learning the German language. If a child has problems with the language, the educator takes care of the child directly in the nursery.

Children with special needs

Some children need more help than others. For example, because they have a disability or could get a disability. There are 2 ways for children to get extra help at the nursery: Early intervention or inclusion support.

Early intervention (children from 0-6 years)

For early intervention, it doesn't matter whether the children are attending a nursery or staying at home. It can take place in almost every nursery. Special needs educators take care of the child. They come to the nursery or the home. Or they come to an early intervention centre. This is a place where children with specific developmental disorders go to get special help.

Inclusion support (children from 3 years)

Children from the age of 3 can receive inclusion support. This is only possible in special nurseries. These nurseries employ people who are well versed in looking after children with specific developmental disorders. They also do therapies with the child.

You can find information on intervention here:

What is done at the nursery?

This is what a day at the nursery may look like:

Simply explained: The nursery voucher

What is a nursery voucher and how do I get one?

In Hamburg, you need a nursery voucher to send your child to nursery. You can get the nursery voucher from your district administration in the nursery department (KTB). Or online at:

www.hamburg.de/antraege/

You must bring the nursery voucher to the nursery of your choice.

The application for the nursery voucher

For children from the age of 1, 5 hours of childcare and lunch are free of charge every day in Hamburg.

Depending on their needs, the children are looked after for 5, 6, 8, 10 or 12 hours.

The nursery voucher specifies ...

- how many hours your child is allowed to attend the nursery
- how much the city of Hamburg pays for it
- how much the parents pay

How much the parents pay depends on ...

- how big the family is
- how much money the parents earn
- how long the child is at the nursery each day

The nursery voucher is valid for a maximum of 1 year. You have to reapply for the nursery voucher every year. Further information:

Simply explained: The start of nursery

What does “familiarisation period” mean and how does it work?

The starting phase in the nursery is called familiarisation period.

Your child can slowly settle in at the nursery.

First together with you and then alone.

You stay with your child at the nursery initially.

The first visits to the nursery are short.

You arrange the times with the educator. An educator takes special care of your child.

He or she is your child’s caregiving educator.

You can ask him or her your questions.

You and your child get to know the new environment together. And you build trust with the educators.

Now comes the next step: You say goodbye to your child and wait in another room of the nursery. After a few minutes you come back to your child.

Your child will then stay longer and longer without you.

When your child cries:

You come straight back and comfort your child.

Familiarisation to the nursery can take several weeks. Until your child can stay alone in the nursery all the time.
